Fall Harvest

Traditionally, fall was the time of the year when First Nation's people prepared for the long, difficult winter ahead. Fortunately, this practice has been preserved and passed down from one generation to the next for thousands of years. Now, Elders in our community who have maintained this tradition will be offering their knowledge to anyone interested. If you would like to learn how to process wild rice, butcher a deer, smoke deer meat and fish, tan a deer hide, prepare and cook bannock and most of all - HAVE FUN, you are invited to join us.

What we learn

- ✿ To increase cultural knowledge through theoretical, traditional and experiential learning.
- ✿ To participate and learn about fall harvest activities.
- ✿ To connect all aspects of self in a natural, culturally based environment.
- ✿ To promote cooperative learning and sharing.
- ✿ To promote healing through the use of traditional harvesting and gathering activities.
